Cohort Default Rate Disclosure

Pratt Community College will publicly disclose its most recent federal Cohort Default Rate (CDR), the percentage of PCC students who borrow federal student loans, and a comparison of the College's CDR to the national average.

This information will be made available on the College's website and updated as new federal data becomes available.

If PCC's CDR exceeds the national average, the College will review the factors contributing to the rate and develop appropriate strategies to improve student loan repayment outcomes and reduce future defaults.
