Get ready, Beavers! We've anticipated your arrival, and are ready to begin a new semester filled with fun. The Fall 2021 semester officially begins August 18th, but hopefully we'll see you sooner during Move-In Day on August 15th.

This semester, we're encouraging students to be involved and aim to be the best they can be!

PCC's Student Success Center focuses on student personal and academic success which guides our interactions with students. They seek positive outcomes for students by carefully attending to the barriers they are experiencing with the goal of self-empowerment and behavioral change on the part of those students in a case management approach.

In addition, PCC's Student Life offers a broad variety of activities and extracurricular educational opportunities for our students. No matter what your interests, there is a club or organization for you!

Performing Arts

PCC Summer Campers Perform Frozen, Jr. Musical

About a month before classes and all through the halls...Not a creature was stirring, not even a...

Wait, there was actually a lot of action on campus at PCC with the pitter patter of little feet.

The Performing Arts department held their Summer Music Theatre Camp. For two weeks, campers of all ages learned and rehearsed their parts for the Frozen musical performance. Pratt High School students played the lead roles with enthusiastic support from younger campers.

Though the number of campers were reduced this year, Performing Arts Instructor Misty Beck was happy for the camp's return.

"The Performing Arts Department hosted our Summer Music Theatre Camp for kids for the last two weeks. We had 60 campers ages 4 through fifth grade plus great middle school, high school and college age helpers as well as several adults. This is the 10th summer camp production of its kind. The show at the end of the two weeks was Frozen, Jr. The kids participated in music, staging, acting, crafts, movie time and more throughout the two weeks."

The number of show tickets were also reduced this year in an effort to reduce crowd size, but the performance was enjoyed by all. It was great to have the kids back on campus at PCC!

Electrical Power Technology

PCC Offers Summer Session CDL Class for EPT Students

It is a requirement for Electrical Power Technology (EPT) students to obtain a Class A Commercial Driver's License as they study to become a lineman. This type of license is required in order to operate utility trucks and trailers out in the field. Students ordinarily earn their CDL during the regular semester, while also handling a full course load plus potential activities and athletics.

For the first time, students are able to take advantage of this offering over the summer, to focus solely on fulfilling the driving requirements before entering the EPT program. EPT Instructor Jeff Hoffman sees the class as a big benefit to those who are able to invest the time.

"Taking this class over the summer will reduce their workload during the school year. This is a class that will be offered in the future to our EPT students, maybe even during the school year. Depending on class size, this course can be completed in 4-6 weeks."

After a period of classroom instruction, students will take the written test at the DMV to earn a Learner's Permit. They can then practice driving skills at PCC over a period of a few weeks, then take the official driving test with the DMV to earn the Class A CDL.

The Summer CDL class is only offered to Pratt Community College students enrolled in the EPT program. It is not open to the public.

MENTAL HEALTH MINUTE

Summertime Boosts

Longer days and warmer weather are here. For many people, summertime is a great and welcomed time of the year. It allows for trips to the lake, the beach, the pool, and lots of outdoor ball games. For others, though, it may not be as welcomed. This could be simply not their favorite time of year, but it could also be that others feel pressure to use the extra time in the daylight hours and then feel guilty if they do not enjoy themselves at the same time. Here are a few things to boost the summertime blues.

1. Practice gratitude. Regularly practicing this allows for boosts to neurotransmitter levels year-round. This year, especially, be grateful that we are not looking like last summer. Many people started the summer of 2020 off by rotating schedules in the office and working from home. We were in masks. We were staying away from family and friends. This summer, many people are more relaxed into life and allowing for the joy of the season to speak for itself.

2. Plan a summer adventure of some sort. Look for little adventures in your hometown. Travel somewhere that holds special memories and share them with your family. Or go somewhere you have never been before to create new memories. Whatever is chosen, joy can even be found in the planning process. It opens up endless possibilities – who goes with you, what all do you want to do, where you choose to stay. Happiness can come from it all. (See how I tied this one into #1?)

3. Even though we have made progress since this time last year, we still need to remember that we are not 100% in the clear yet. Regardless of your personal views, remember to honor any concerns of others -and yourself- that exist with the virus.

4. Add something new to your lifestyle. Did you ever want to learn a new language? Or try some DIY projects around the house? This summer, boost your happy levels with something fun that makes you feel good about yourself. The idea is not to beat yourself up because you cannot learn a new language as easily as you could have if you were five years old. The idea is to do something outside of your norm that is fun and relaxing.

5. Reconnect. Being around people can make a significant difference to our mental wellbeing.

Adding joy back into your world can always make your time a lot more fun than previous years. Most of all, we just need to allow ourselves to have fun. Play a little bit. Do something fun and new. The stuff of life is a wonderful and natural healer for our summertime blues.

PCC Statement Regarding ADN Nursing Program

At the June 16 quarterly meeting of the Kansas State Board of Nursing (KSBN), Pratt Community College (PCC) Administration was notified that the conditional approval of the PCC Associate Degree Nursing Program (ADN) has been withdrawn. This means that PCC is no longer approved to teach the ADN Nursing Program effectively immediately. This action is primarily a result of PCC consistently not meeting the state required pass rates of the National Council Licensure Examination-RN (NCLEX), which states that a minimum of 75% of students taking the test must pass the NCLEX on their first attempt. PCC has fallen short of this mark in four of the last five years.

In anticipation of this possibility, PCC Administration has been in conversations with an area community college about delivering the ADN curriculum on the PCC campus. Following this decision by KSBN, these conversations will intensify in an attempt to ensure the ADN Program will continue to be offered in our area.

Incoming ADN students and internal stakeholders have been notified of the KSBN decision.

“Obviously, we are very disappointed with the decision made by the Kansas State Board of Nursing,” Pratt Community College President Dr. Michael Calvert said. “We were hoping to be allowed to teach the program one more year and then work with a community college partner to deliver the program here in Pratt. Concern over the ADN Program has been an on-going situation for several years, and the college has put forth great effort and resources in attempt to regain the quality of our ADN Program. We are disappointed that we were not successful, but we remain hopeful that a partner can be secured to teach this program starting in 2022.”

The action taken on June 16th by KSBN has no effect on the PCC Licensed Practical Nursing Program (LPN). The LPN Program has full five-year approval from KSBN with solid NCLEX outcomes, which consistently hit 90%. This action does not affect the PCC Pre-Nursing Program.

GO BEAVER SPORTS

PCC Adds eSports as NJCAA-Sanctioned Event

PRATT, Kan.- As the world of eSports has evolved, so too has Pratt Community College. The Beavers athletic department has announced the school's current eSports team, formerly a club activity, will now be recognized as an NJCAA-sanctioned sport.

"We are excited to bring eSports under the athletics umbrella," said Pratt Community College athletic director Tim Swartzendruber. "With NJCAA now sponsoring eSports, it makes sense for us. Chris Nelson has done a great job of starting and building a successful eSports program here at PCC. We look forward to continuing that success."

Nelson, who has been the head coach of the school's eSports team since 2018, sees the move as simply a sign of the times.

"eSports moving under the athletics umbrella feels like a natural transition and inevitable materialization," said Nelson. "eSports has become an inescapable part of the collegiate environment, growing at an unprecedented pace. I am excited to join the program with the exceptional athletic programs at PCC."

Nelson previously spent seven years in charge of IT compliance and production at an oil company. Before that, he had owned a photography business, in which he was in charge of nine employees at one point. He also held the hat of a software consultant for Innovative Computing Corporation, a company that wrote software for transportation such as shipping for trucks, airlines, and railroads across the United States and Canada.

eSports, otherwise known as competitive, organized gaming, joins men's and women's tennis as newly-added athletic events to Pratt's athletic offerings. More details regarding the team and its logistics will be available soon.

PCC Graphic Design

Students Dive Deeper into the Graphic Design Industry

Valarie Dellrocco's Graphic Design students take a regular field trip to design and print companies like X Press Signs and Graphics and Rand Graphics in Wichita. They learn about the design process from the time a customer walks in the door with an idea, all the way to the finished product. Students research the companies they visit and even the restaurant they plan to eat in to observe website layouts and menu design, and to have questions ready for their visits.

It gets better! Student artwork is displayed in an art show on campus, and the Photography class takes field trips. Student took a field trip to Kansas Wildlife & Parks to take unique pictures. This is a great way to showcase individual talents and skills!

PRATT COMMUNITY COLLEGE CELEBRATE DIVERSITY TEAM

The History of America's Independence Day

"Taxation without representation!" was the battle cry in America's 13 Colonies, which were forced to pay taxes to England's King George III despite having no representation in the British Parliament. As dissatisfaction grew, British troops were sent in to quell the early movement toward rebellion. Repeated attempts by the Colonists to resolve the crisis without military conflict proved fruitless.

On June 11, 1776, the Colonies' Second Continental Congress met in Philadelphia and formed a committee whose express purpose was drafting a document that would formally sever their ties with Great Britain. The committee included Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston. Jefferson, who was considered the strongest and most eloquent writer, crafted the original draft document (as seen above). A total of 86 changes were made to his draft and the Continental Congress officially adopted the final version on July 4, 1776.

The following day, copies of the Declaration of Independence were distributed, and on July 6, The Pennsylvania Evening Post became the first newspaper to print the extraordinary document. The Declaration of Independence has since become our nation's most cherished symbol of liberty.

Bonfires and Illuminations

On July 8, 1776, the first public readings of the Declaration were held in Philadelphia's Independence Square to the ringing of bells and band music. One year later, on July 4, 1777, Philadelphia marked Independence Day by adjourning Congress and celebrating with bonfires, bells and fireworks.

The custom eventually spread to other towns, both large and small, where the day was marked with processions, oratory, picnics, contests, games, military displays and fireworks. Observations throughout the nation became even more common at the end of the War of 1812 with Great Britain.

In June of 1826, Thomas Jefferson sent a letter to Roger C. Weightman, declining an invitation to come to Washington, D.C. to help celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. It was the last letter that Jefferson, who was gravely ill, ever wrote. In it, Jefferson says of the document:

"May it be to the world, what I believe it will be ... the signal of arousing men to burst the chains ... and to assume the blessings and security of self-government. That form, which we have substituted, restores the free right to the unbounded exercise of reason and freedom of opinion. All eyes are opened, or opening, to the rights of man. ... For ourselves, let the annual return of this day forever refresh our recollections of these rights, and an undiminished devotion to them."

- Thomas Jefferson
June 24, 1826 Monticello

Congress established Independence Day as a holiday in 1870, and in 1938 Congress reaffirmed it as a paid holiday for federal employees. Today, communities across the nation mark this major midsummer holiday with parades, firework displays, picnics and performances of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and marches by John Philip Sousa.
